When practicing chinese medicine, one cannot rely on apparatuses or tests to know the exact details of a case – be it biological, sociological or even cosmological. Instead one must rely on logical principles that can be applied on any level. One aims to know the "why" as the exact details of the "what" have not traditionally been available. The theory of Yin and Yang is the most fundamental of these theories.

In this presentation the aim is to relate how the theory of Yin and Yang is present in the mechanism of EZ-water and also how it might point out to having also consequences in larger scale, in relation to human consciousness - placing man traditionally speaking between heaven and earth, either being in sync with and a part of that trinity, or out of sync. Also mechanisms and logic of this "circuitry" are discussed and our natural methods of regulating it are proposed, the role of breathing for one. A question will be asked of the relationship of EZ-water and our consciousness and what charge might have to do with it.

There seems to be a common thread running through the ancient knowledge all the way to the findings concerning EZ-water, hopefully this thread might be woven into form and more ideas might be extracted from this thread that might hopefully benefit the future studies and intrigue the people conducting them and all the listeners in general.
