Bio

In the early nineties, Gery launched one of the first European "Internet Services Providers". Since that time he became a well-known "serial internet entrepreneur" and launched over half a dozen internet companies.

Current Companies

- (1) Linxs, a "managed connectivity service" helping companies securely connect "remote assets" with their cloud infrastructure. (www.linxs.io)
- (2) FlatCarbon gives advise to companies in order to help them understand how graphene will disrupt their industries and what needs to be done in order to "graphenise" existing products and processes. (www.flatcarbon.com)

The Memory of Water

Despite the fact that Gery is an 'internet entrepreneur', he has always been fascinated by "water".

His father, who started as a regular physician and is now already practising homeopathy for the past 40 years, is one of the main reasons for his 'water fascination'.

In 2006 -Gery just sold a previous business and had some money in the bank- he decided to start a small 'water research' lab. This because he wanted to investigate if water could have a memory, and -if so- how this memory could be explained.

Gery teamed with a Russian Bio-Physicist - Prof. Dr. Alex Kaivarainen- and during a period of about 12 months Alex and Gery performed many 'water experiments'. These experiments not only showed that water indeed has a memory, but also confirmed Alex' quantum hypothesis about how this memory could be working Unfortunately, by the time Gery & Alex were ready to publish their results, Alex unexpectedly passed away and Gery started another internet business.

At the Water Conference 2018 in Sofia Gery will for the first time present Alex' quantum hypothesis regarding the memory of water including the successful experiments Alex and he performed, now over a decade ago.
